Renewed reports reached here today that General Maas is preparing to attack the American troops here with a force of 12,000 men. This is a further indication of the tep decided upon by Huerta.

Insiders know that the delay of the Americans in starting toward the capital has greatly embarrassed Huerta: having failed to reunite Mexico, he is playing his next card toward getting American protection against destruction at the hands of the rebels. It was the hope of the dictator that the demand for the surrender of the Tejar waterworks would provoke an engagement.
